Scotch Guard

When people think of cleaning their carpets and furniture, they often consider whether they should have Scotch Guard applied as well. Stain protection for your furniture and carpets is a wise decision, however most people have a misconception about stain protection products.

"How does Scotch Guard work"?

The most common fallacy about Scotchgard is the idea that adding fabric protection will keep them brand new looking. This is simply not the case, even with Scotch Guard, persistent maltreatment of furniture and carpets will show wear and tear.

When ServiceMaster Clean technicians apply Scotch Guard, it will create a protective shield that repels liquid, dirt and grime, thus giving you the time you need to clean the spills and prevent stains. If you spill red wine for instance, and the carpet does not have Scotch Guard, you will see the carpet turn a pink color as the wine absorbs into the fiber. If you spill that same glass of wine and your carpet is Scotch Guard protected, you will see the wine bead up and remain on top of the carpet. By repelling the liquid, you can run and grab some paper towel, apply it to the spill and let the liquid absorb into that, rather than your carpet. The purpose of Scotchgard is to give you the time you need to prevent a stain.
